Dear Madam/Sir:

I think Microsoft Corp. has acted in good faith and given up many of its legal rights in order to bring to an end the anti-innovation anti-trust suit brought by the Justice Department and some states on behalf of special corporate interests. The settlement reached by Microsoft and Justice appears to be in the second best interest of the public -- the first would have been to leave Microsoft alone and allow them to continue to develop great software and give American consumers free computer tools -- and as a computer user I hope the Justice Department will second this settlement in earnest.

Happy New Year.
